Validation Theory

“When did you know you could be successful in college?”

- Faculty took time to learn my name.
- Faculty gave me opportunities to see myself be successful.
- I could see myself in the course’s curriculum.
- Faculty became partners in my learning.

Post-PD Instructor-Student Email:

I noticed you missed a few things last week and this, so wanted to make sure everything was ok. I know the first 6 weeks of the course are pretty busy, but it's midsemester and you'll notice the readings will lighten up considerably, so hang in there!

If there is anything I can do to help out, please let me know!

Student Response (verbatim)

Hey Professor Englund,

I cant even put into words to describe how surprised I am that you sent me an email like this. I never expected an teacher to go this far to reach out. I really appreciate it.

“[These communications have] uncovered so many of the obstacles [my students] are facing that I would have no idea about. The cool thing is that I've then been able to refer them to resources on/off campus. It's been eye-opening in so many ways that something so simple could mean so much. Wow.”

A black and white photograph of a classroom. Several students are seen from behind, holding up their smartphones to take pictures of a chalkboard. The chalkboard is filled with faint, illegible writing. The scene is brightly lit, likely from windows on the right side of the frame. The overall atmosphere is one of active learning and digital engagement.

"This was a very unique, enjoyable project. I felt we really had a chance to show what we learned, while getting creative ourselves. It was also very challenging. For me, even coming up with a theme was a challenge, but I had a lot of fun with it. ...it was a lot of work but it really gives us a chance to show what we have learned."
